GLEICHEN GIRL IN PRETTY WEDDING

Dorothy M. Stocken Bride of W. H. Symonds, of Queen's Bay, B. C. Many Beautiful Presents.

The marriage of Dorothy Mary Stocken, daughter of the Rev. Canon H. W. G. Stocken, to Walter Hugh Symonds, of Queen's Bay, B. C., son of the late Edward Symonds, Esquire, of Suffolk, England, took place at St. John's Memorial Church Blackfoot reserve, Gleichen, on Monday afternoon, September 29th.

The ceremony was performed by the Venerable Archdeacon Tims, D. D., assisted by the Rev. S. J. Stocken, uncle of the bride.

The church, which had been decorated for the Harvest Festival of the previous day, was well filled with the friends of the bride and bridegroom, and Indians connected with the Mission, conspicuous among the latter being the head chief, David Yellow Horse.

The bride wore a charming gown of ivory Japanese silk, and embroidered silk net veil with a coronet of white chrysanthemums, and wore a gold bracelet, the gift of the bridegroom.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Alice and Dora Stocken, sisters of the bride. They were dressed in apple green Japanese crepe, embroidered with white daisies, and large straw hats trimmed with one-eyed daisies and black velvet. They wore gold link bracelets, presents of the bridegroom. Their bouquets consisted of white and yellow chrysanthemums.

The hymns, "O Perfect Love," and "O Father, All Creating" were sung during the service. Miss Tims presided at the organ and played Mendelssohn's wedding march as the bridal party left the church.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony on the Mission grounds, and refreshments were served.

The newly married pair left on the afternoon train for Calgary, en route to Queen's Bay, B. C., where in future they will reside. The bride's travelling costume was of grey diagonal serge with collar and revers of black and Alice blue silk and a large black hat lined with Alice blue silk and trimmed with a large black ostrich plume.

The bride has ever been a very popular young lady with everyone in Gleichen, as well as with all the Blackfoot Indians, and her departure is very much regretted. Miss Dorothy was born on the Blackfoot reserve, and conversed most fluently with them in their own language. Over one hundred of them were present at the wedding, and as each one shook hands with her in saying goodbye had many pleasant remarks to make. Indian like, they gave her a name when she was an infant, by which they still address her, which is "Owl Eyes." They gave her this name as she had very large bright eyes when a baby. One said to her in Blackfoot: "Goodbye Owl Eyes, always good papoose. Kind to Indians—and gave us lots to eat."

The happy couple were recipients of many handsome presents, including:

The Bishop and Mrs. and the Misses Pinkham—Crown derby coffee set. Bride to bridegroom—Brass smoking set and gold tie pin. Bridegroom to bride—Gold bangle. Mrs. T. Betts, England [bridegroom's grandmother]—Cheque. Mr. and Mrs. D. L. D. Brereton—Cheque. The Misses and Masters Brereton—Cushion. Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Brown—Cold meat fork.

Grain Marketed So Far 126,453

For the week ending yesterday morning there were 18 carloads of grain shipped from Gleichen, and there were 11 more to be shipped that day. This includes track and elevator shipments. The total number of bushels shipped this season up to yesterday morning was 115,000. There still is plenty of cars ready for loading and there is no indication of there being a shortage.

The town has been alive with farmers bringing wagon loads of grain, and the rush is now well started. The other morning at 8 o'clock there were counted at the elevators no less than eight loads, and more could be seen coming along the roads.

Below is the total number of bushels marketed this week, also for the season and the total amount shipped.

tea table and cloth, and gasoline iron. Rev. and Mrs. S. J. Stocken—case of knives and carvers. Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Stocken—Tea set in case and tray. Miss Stocken—Silver casserole dish. Misses A. and D. Stocken—Embroidered service. Mrs. F. Swainson [Eng.]—Silver salts. Mrs. Ed. Symonds [bridegroom's mother]—Cheque. Canon and Mrs. Herbert Symonds—Pearl handled fish carvers. Miss M. Symonds—Four silver vases. Archdeacon and Mrs. Tims—Japanese crumb tray and egg cups. Miss Turner—Chinese worked tea cosy. Head Chief David Yellow Horse—Heavily beaded moccasins. Presents of beadwork were also received from many of the Blackfoot Indians.

INDIAN FARMERS' PROFIT THIS YEAR IS A THOUSAND DOLLARS EACH

If the good results obtained this year by farming on the Blackfoot reserve by and for the Indians continue from year to year there will be no doubt that the surrendering of the land will be of immense benefit not only to the Indians but this town and district generally. It is stated authentically from this year's crop each Indian farmer will receive an average of about $1,000 from his grain crops. This, of course, is based upon what the market price may be.

This year there were about 50 farms partly in crop, next year eleven more will be added and so on each year until the full 180 are in crop.

A point that is in favor of the Indians farming is that they will spend all their profits in the immediate vicinity and will not be sending to departmental stores.

The threshing is nearing completion and every day the grain of the redmen is being hauled to the Alberta elevator and disposed of. Their crops are proving a magnificent yield, which reflects credit on the agent, farm instructors and the entire staff in charge.

Farm Instructor Ostrander stated the average of $1,000 to each Indian this year was approximately right.

From one farm it was proven by actual elevator weight that the wheat ran 43 bushels to the acre and graded generally No. 1.

NAMAKA NEWSLETS

A thanksgiving dance is to be given in the Namaka Hall on Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 20th.

Threshing continues in full swing at Namaka.

The Namaka Farm is using one of the self-loaders for gathering up the bundles and loading them into the racks. It is claimed that three men can do the work of seven, but it is doubtful if these loaders will come into general use, unless the price is considerably reduced.

Stanley Taylor who was in charge of the Namaka Farm engine received word of the death of his father in Toronto. He left for the east on Saturday afternoon.

George Lane is at present visiting the Namaka Farm and doubtless he has a reason to be well pleased with his purchase. In fact most people believe he has a snap.

The syndicate of local farmers outfit has been doing good work at E. F. Wheeler's with R Coates as engineer. They have had some good days' runs. The grain is grading well and the yield good. Some of Mr. Wheeler's oats made 93 bushels to the acre.

Sim and Anderson are having a splendid run with their outfit and own up to threshing 1,700 bushels of oats and barley in one day on Bert Pagget's Farm. J. B. Sim's own oats averaged from 80 to 90 bushels and his wheat turned out 30 bushels to the acre.

J. C. Peterson's outfit has also been busy. He reports T. A. Thoresen's barley over 40 bushels to the acre Extra No. 1, T. Inman's wheat 40 bushels to the acre, C. Benty 35 bushels to the acre H. Brecker & Stim Bros. also had good yield but your correspondent was unable to get the exact figures.

The Deatly gasoline outfit has pulled into Elmer Litz's Farm north of Namaka and is looking for a good run around this district.

ARCHDEACON TIMS GIVES INTERESTING REMINISCENCES OF GLEICHEN

The thanksgiving services held in St. Andrew's church were well attended both morning and evening. The church was most tastefully decorated with flowers, grains, grasses, vegetables and fruits. The Venerable Archdeacon Tims, D. D., occupied the pulpit in the evening and was assisted in the service by the Rev. E. Cox Clark. In opening his discourse the Archdeacon said he had only consented to take Bishop Pinkham's place on account of he being ill and with the understanding that he would not attempt a sermon but only give a general talk. After dwelling on the many reasons the people of Gleichen had had for giving thanks this year he gave some interesting reminiscences. He told how that he came to Gleichen in 1883 and here conducted the first Christian services in 1884 ever held under the shadow of the Rocky Mountains in one of the Canadian Pacific railroad construction camps, which was located about where the Indian Agency now stands. When the station was built he held meetings in the little waiting room, and here was where the first thanksgiving services were held. When the section house was built services were then moved to it. Then the building of a church was mooted and built in 1886, and in 1887 St. Andrew's church was the first church to be consecrated this side of the Canadian Rockies. From this he went on to show the progress made in this country step by step and showed how many things the people had to be thankful for.

A Chain of Legal Difficulties

Consequent Upon a Youthful Love

By RUTH GRAHAM

Daniel and Mary Longman had been married ten years and had no children. Mary especially longed for a child, and largely on her account Daniel wished for one too. One evening just about dark and before the lamps were lighted Mary heard a queer sound in the hall just within the front door. Lighting a candle, she investigated and found a basket, in which was a newborn baby boy. An envelope was also found containing $100 in bills.

Mary Longman examined the baby's clothes, which were of fine texture, and found an initial letter embroidered on the slip. She also noticed two moles on its body, one on the right leg near the thigh, the other quite large under the left shoulder blade. Thinking the slip might be of use some day for identification purposes, she put it away, planning to it a description of the boy, including mention of the moles.

THERE LAY A BUNDLE WRAPPED IN BROWN PAPER.

They gave him a name—Francis—and adopted him for their son, though not legally, for they were poor persons and had no property to leave him. As soon as he grew old enough to show any bent he displayed a strong inclination to work with tools on wood, making small articles, which he managed to sell in order to get money, which a child always finds needful. When he was fifteen years old he had become quite expert at this kind of work. He became dissatisfied with the quiet life he was leading, and one morning he was missing without leaving any word.

The way Frank had come to be left at the Longmans was this: In the same town lived a gentleman named Fletcher. A daughter, Phoebe, eighteen years of age, fell in love with a young man named Reynolds, who was not acceptable to the girl's parents. Phoebe married Reynolds clandestinely. Before the marriage was admitted he left for parts unknown. Then, it being discovered that Phoebe would become a mother, her parents concluded to keep the whole matter secret, put away the child as soon as born and take their daughter abroad on a plea of ill health.

Before the child was born Mr. Fletcher died, his demise being hastened by his trouble concerning his daughter. When the boy came Mrs. Fletcher, who had heard of the Longmans and their desire for a child, sent one in her confidence with the baby to their house, who, finding the front door unlocked, set the basket in the hall. A few weeks later Mrs. Fletcher sailed for Europe with the mother, who, retaining her maiden name, was supposed to be an unmarried woman.

It was Mrs. Fletcher's intention to send Daniel and Mary Longman from time to time money to pay for the care of the child, and the grandmother had promised her daughter that on her return from Europe she would find a way to get the boy back and bring him up in their home. But the young mother died abroad, and Mrs. Fletcher remained there some time after her daughter's death.

On Mrs. Fletcher's return she was met by a lawsuit on the part of a brother of her late husband, Thomas Fletcher, who claimed that under the will of their father, his brother having left no heirs, he (Thomas) succeeded to the bulk of the estate. Mrs. Fletcher would have produced the founding but for the scandal and condemnation of her conduct which were sure to follow the act. So she fought the case as owner of her husband's property as his widow, holding the boy in reserve in case the suit went against her.

During the period when the case was in court she was much in need of ready money for legal expenses and sent nothing to the Longmans for her grandchild's use. The case was decided against her several times, but she always appealed from the decisions. At last, worn out by disappointment and anxiety, she fell ill and, realizing that she was about to die, informed her lawyers of her grandson's existence. She died soon after making the confession.

The question of the ownership now turned upon Frank Longman, or, to give him his real name, Frank Reynolds.

As the adopted son of the Longmans he was of no especial importance, but as the heir to a valuable estate he was of a great deal of importance, for he was keeping his uncle, Thomas Fletcher, out of the property. The latter saw at once that his best chance to secure it was to prove his nephew dead. He put detectives to work on the case, who found stains of blood on clothing that Frank had left behind when he went away. This was really of no importance, because the boy had been constantly cutting himself with the sharp instruments he used in the articles he made, but it was quite enough to bring a charge of murder against the Longmans, especially since an analysis of the stains showed them to be human blood.

Longman and his wife were brought to trial for murder. The detectives employed, paid liberally by Thomas Fletcher, brought testimony from neighbors that about the time Frank disappeared they had heard cries, in the voice of a boy, emanate from the Longmans' abode. This, together with the blood stains and other corroborative manufactured testimony, made a strong case against the accused. Thomas Fletcher sent a messenger to them to say that if they would give him evidence that the boy was dead he would see that the charge of murder was withdrawn. This meant that they should make affidavit that Frank had been drowned and his body never recovered.

The Longmans, although they saw the gallows staring them in the face, declined to testify falsely to save themselves. Besides, they had no reason to suppose that Frank was dead, and if he could be found they wished him to come to his own. When the trial was over and the case submitted to the jury there was a disagreement. The accused had been in jail for a long while and had the prospect of remaining there for an indefinite time. But attorneys who were interested in producing the heir to the estate had been advertising largely for Frank, and when after the trial the prisoners were being led out of the courtroom to the jail they were astonished to meet their foster child coming in.

All three were at once locked in an embrace. This ended the murder trial, but did not restore Frank Reynolds to his own. The attorneys of Thomas Fletcher entered a denial that he was the son of Phoebe Fletcher, and he was required to produce proof that he was. His foster mother had years before put away the garment in which the baby had been brought to her house and the description of him, including the marks on his body. During her imprisonment she had been much broken down. She had remembered where she had placed these articles of identification for a number of years, but since no one came to claim the foundling and she had come to regard him as her son she gradually let the place of safe keeping pass away from her. In her enfeebled condition she found it impossible to recall where she had put them.

However, she remembered what articles she had put away, and she was sure she had never destroyed them. All depended upon their being somewhere in the house. That she had hidden them she also remembered, for she had feared that if she put them with other articles in ordinary use they might be destroyed or given away without its being known what they were. The house was searched from top to bottom, but the proofs were not found. It seemed that, after all, the boy must lose an estate that was his by right for the want of a child's shift.

At times memory requires a starter. Daniel Longman was in the garret looking for the lost articles when in a corner he stepped on a board that creaked. That creak brought to life the germ, so to speak, of a memory. It came slowly, but it came surely. It was so vague that at first he considered it as nothing. But that creak continued to work in his brain. The same evening while at supper he told his wife that he had a faint remembrance of his hiding the articles for her. Later he said he believed he had taken up a board in a floor, she had put the things in it and he had nailed the board down. Suddenly he arose from his half-finished supper, seized a screwdriver and hammer and, taking a lamp, went up into the garret. His wife and Frank followed him to the corner where he had stepped on the board that creaked. In a minute the board was taken up, and there lay a bundle wrapped in brown paper. Opening it, he took out a baby's garment, to which was pinned a bit of paper.

For a second time the three embraced.

The next morning the proofs were taken to the lawyers who had conducted the case for Mrs. Fletcher, completing a chain of evidence which established the boy's identity, and in due time he was put into possession of his estate. He took his foster parents to live with him in the house where his own mother had been born, and as they had suffered greatly they needed rest, of which they got a plenty,

I Remember.

I remember, I remember,
When courtin' Sal I went,
The parlor where so many Delightful hours were spent;
The good old boarding school,
The crayon portraits, too,
Which stared so impudently
As crayon portraits do;
The whatnot in the corner
Filled up with ancient junk;
The stuffed owl on the mantel,
Who listened to the bunk
I peddled just like you did
When courtin' of your gal,
And life was simply heaven
When I was courtin' Sal.

I remember, I remember,
How I marched up the aisle,
The knot tied by the pastor
Has held for quite awhile.
The horsehair sofa's missing,
The crayon portraits, too—
We're living in apartments
With modern stuff clear through.
The stuffed owl is not with us,
Perched up above the grate;
We have no corner whatnots,
For we are up to date.
I remember, I remember,
I married Sal, you bet.
The landlord and collectors
Will not let me forget.

Too Busy.

Gotham—How many buttons has your wife got on the back of that dress?

Flatbush—Oh, I'm sure I don't know! "Why, you've buttoned it up for her enough, haven't you?"

"And you don't know how many buttons are there?"

Disquieting Possibility.

Where would the gossips get their ideas? If you and I should go to bed.

To do what we ought to do.

Just as we should, you know?

If we should leave no thing undone,

No duty unfulfilled every day.

But worked from morn to set of sun

With patient ardor thrilled,

What would the gossips do, my dear?

I surely wish I knew.

If you and I were most discreet,

What would folk talk about?

If I went straight upon my way

Nor ever swerved aside,

If you austerely every day

Took duty for your guide,

If I should ne'er temptation meet,

If you should pleasure flout,

If you and I were most discreet,

What would folk talk about?

What would folk say to those they meet,

What would they talk about,

If you and I were most discreet?

That I can't figure out.

John Jones.

To curiosity John Jones in childhood stooped,
And all the while he roamed and boys
Declared he snooped.

In other people's business still
To poke he tried,
And as a young man comrades all
Announced he pried.

When grown he went in politics,
Becoming great,
And people found he would with skill
Investigate.

He grew until he got inside
A statesman's robes,
A government commission formed,
And now he probes.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Vegetables For Children.

This is the time of year to cultivate a child's taste for fresh vegetables, which give needed variety of food and furnish acids and salts that are essential to the proper balancing of the diet.

After the third year, authorities say, a child may safely eat any fresh vegetable, provided it is thoroughly cooked. A good rule for the proper preparation of vegetables for children is to have them so well cooked that they can be easily mashed with a fork.

Green vegetables intended for children are especially recommended when in the form of a puree, the thoroughly boiled vegetable being pressed through a sieve. Such purees serve a good purpose as the foundation for a portion of meat, fish or poultry. They may also be thinned with hot milk or equal parts of milk and water and used as a soup.

HUNDRED DOLLAR PIKERS.

John, the Porter, Thought He Had a Tip, but Had to Yield Up.

When Tetrazzini was staying at the Hotel Rector her manager asked the porter to get railroad tickets for her party to Chicago. As they were leaving the hotel the manager asked John, the porter, what he paid for them.

"Ninety-five dollars,"

The singer's representative handed over a $100 bill, saying, "Keep the change."

When Tetrazzini returned to New York she found an item of $95 on her first week's bill at the Rector. Her manager challenged it and was politely informed that it was for the railroad tickets which the hotel had purchased on his order and had paid for.

"But I paid John, the porter," Tetrazzini's manager explained.

When he went to John about it the porter didn't know it had been charged. Then he ran his hand into his pocket, pulled out a roll of bills fat enough to choke a cow, peeled a yellow century note off the outside and handed it back. When the impresario's back was turned John muttered to Ed Keogh, the chief clerk:

"Another of them pikers."

John, the porter, is said to be worth $100,000. He is now at the Hotel Vanderbilt.—New York Sun.

POOR MOTHERS' PENSIONS.

They Are Now Authorized by Law in Eighteen States.

State wide mothers' pension laws are now in effect in sixteen states, and laws covering certain cities are in effect in two additional states. The sixteen states are: California, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Utah, Washington.

The two states in which laws exist covering certain communities are Missouri and Wisconsin, the Missouri law covering St. Louis and Kansas City and the Wisconsin law covering Milwaukee.

In addition, mothers' pension laws exist in Australia (Victoria) and in New Zealand.

As a rule, the laws limit pensions to mothers of children under a certain age, varying from fourteen to eighteen years. In some cases the money may be paid to a person, other than the mother, designated by the court. In all cases there must be an investigation by the juvenile court or by an agent of a charitable society or by some state board or state attorney or by commissioners directly appointed by the governor.—Outlook.

A Cure For Ivy Poisoning.

Many methods of treatment have been employed for ivy poisoning. One very simple method is to rub the skin well with a bit of rag saturated with sulphuric ether. This should be done in the early stages of poisoning. A single application is usually enough. The action of the ether is to take the volatile oil into solution and spread it over such a large surface that it becomes rapidly oxidized and harmless. If the poisoning has lasted for several days a secondary inflammation of the skin may have developed, which would require more elaborate medical treatment.—Farm Journal.

From Colon to Panama.

A map of the Panama canal zone showing the big ditch in profile causes the average citizen first to rub his eyes and then hunt up an atlas. On the right side of the map are the gulfs of Panama and the Pacific ocean. On the left are the Caribbean sea and the Atlantic. The map shows the canal running from west to east, from Colon to Panama. To many persons the idea of sailing east from Colon to get to Panama is a new one. But that's the way the ships will go through the canal. The Pacific ocean is east of the Atlantic ocean down there.—New York Sun.

Red Tape In France.

In 1827 the French minister of the interior appointed an official functionary at a salary of 75 francs a month whose duties consisted of attending the ministerial offices on two evenings a week for the purpose of extinguishing the oil lamps then in use. This method of illumination has long been extinct, yet the official extinguisher appointed in 1870 still continues to occupy the post.

Mongolian Lamas.

Every third man in Mongolia is a lama. Some live in tents with and with their relatives, while others live in the temples. The temple lamas are of the lower type. They are coarse and filthy and much inferior both morally and physically to the tent lamas. They are not unlike those sometimes seen by travelers in the Lama temple at Peking, China. The lamas living in tents among the people are of a better class and are much respected and looked up to all over Mongolia. Some, which consists of the two temples and their outbuildings, forms one of the largest and most important lamaseries in outer Mongolia. There are about 2,000 lamas living here, some quite young, as some is an important theological school. This lamasery or monastery is a town in itself and very interesting. Lamas may be seen here of all ages and degrees. On the tops and corners of the temples are prayer wheels covered with gold leaf. These contain long prayers written on rolls of script, and the wheels revolve in the wind.—National Geographic Magazine.

Effect of an Explosion.

It seems incredible that an explosion could be of such force as to cause an ordinary steel rail to wrap itself twice round the trunk of a large tree, yet there was just such a result from the discharge of gelignite at Nanaimo, B. C. Twelve workmen lost their lives by this explosion. The rail was lying on the ground fully thirty feet from the spot at which the explosion occurred, yet it was lifted into the air, sent in the direction of the tree and twisted round the trunk thereof, just as if it had been a piece of piano wire. It was so tightly wrapped about the trunk that it cut deeply into the green wood and caused great splinters to start out on all sides. The explosive responsible for this unique occurrence is one of the most powerful preparations known, composed of nitroglycerin, nitrocellulose, sodium nitrate, sodium carbonate and wood pulp.—St. Louis Globe.

Involuntary Fasting.

A remarkable feat of involuntary fasting was performed twelve years ago by a corporal in a regiment of French colonial infantry. On his way to work one morning a man heard cries proceeding from a disused mine near Brest. At the bottom of an excavation nearly 100 feet deep Corporal Andre Desrats was found in so weak a condition that he could scarcely articulate a word. When he recovered his rescuers learned that after accidentally falling into the mine Desrats had been imprisoned for twenty-eight days without anything to eat or drink. But a pig can beat a man. Dr. W. B. Carpenter in his "Manual of Physiology" records that a pig weighing 100 pounds was entombed by the fall of a portion of the chalk cliffs at Dover. It was dug out 180 days later and found to be still alive, but reduced in weight to forty pounds.—London Mail.

Smallest Deer In the World.

The "mousedeer" of India and Africa is the chevrotin, one of the smallest hoofed animals. It stands less than twelve inches in height at the shoulder. The prevailing color of the fur is brown, finely speckled with yellow. The spots are large and sometimes run into each other and form stripes. The underparts of the body are white. It possesses the peculiar habit of walking on the tips of its hoofs. This lends a stiffness to the legs which has gained for the chevrotin the reputation of having no knee joints. It has no horns or antlers. But, as in the case of the musk deer, the male is provided with large canine teeth or tusks in the upper jaw. It is of exceedingly timid disposition and lies hidden in the jungle throughout the day and only ventures to feed in the early morning and after dusk in the evening.

Open Spaces In Cities.

Along with the new keenness over social and economic reform England has developed a number of other virtues in the past score of years. One is an appreciation of the value of open spaces in cities, and one is the increased determination to preserve ancient landmarks. Every few months an article appears in the Times or some other influential newspaper acquainting people with the danger that threatens some historical or long cherished spot, and usually the money necessary to save the property has been forthcoming.—Indianapolis News.

Practical Course Coming.

"Father," asked the girl who was going to marry a poor man, "do you think I ought to take a course in household economics? They offer a lovely one at Briny Moore for $300."

"No," replied pater grimly. "You will get one for nothing after you are married."—Judge.

The Request.

"Did Baron Fucash ask you for my hand, father?" asked Gwendolyn.

"No," replied Mr. Cumrox. "He called to discuss a marriage settlement. He didn't ask for your hand. He asked for my pocketbook."—Washington Star.

Keeping Them Down.

Cookery Points

Summer Recipes.

Huckleberry Pudding.—A huckleberry pudding is made in this way. Cream a cupful of butter and the same amount of sugar. Then add the yolks of three eggs, beating in one at a time, and then the whites whipped stiff. Add half a cupful of milk and two cupfuls of flour, sifted with a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Wash and spread them on a clean dry towel or board to dry. When they are dry mix them with flour and add them to the batter. Bake the pudding in a round or square pudding dish well buttered. Serve with hard sauce flavored with nutmeg.

A good hard sauce for this pudding is made with half a cupful of butter beaten to a cream and thickened with a cupful of powdered sugar. White egg white, light and stiff, season it with a grain or two of salt and a good deal of nutmeg and fold it lightly into the butter and sugar.

Huckleberry Dumplings.—Huckleberry dumplings are made with carefully cleaned fruit, a tablespoonful of which is put in each dumpling. Make the dumplings of a quart of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a teaspoonful of salt, a piece of butter the size of an egg, a grated potato and enough milk to make a soft biscuit dough. Roll the dough half an inch thick and break it in pieces four inches square. In the center of each of these pieces put a tablespoonful of the berries. Pull up the edges of the dumplings and then lay them on a buttered pudding dish. Steam them until the fruit is soft. Serve with hard or brandy sauce.

Huckleberry Pie.—To make a delicious huckleberry pie line a plate with good paste and pile three cupfuls of washed and dried huckleberries in the center of the plate. Mix sufficient sugar to sweeten the berries with a teaspoonful of flour and sprinkle this over the berries. Then sprinkle the berries with a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Put on a top crust prickled with a dozen places and bake slowly until the fruit is soft and the crust is brown.

Currant Muffins.—One cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls of fat, a quarter cupful of sugar, half a teaspoonful of salt, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one egg, one-third cupful of currants. Mix and sift dry materials together, add milk, then beaten egg and melted fat. Stir in currants, which have been washed and sprinkled with a little flour. Bake in a moderate oven about twenty minutes.

Apple Fritters.—Cut tart, peeled and cored apples into slices one-third of an inch thick, dip these slices into a batter made of one pint of milk, three eggs and a saltspoonful of baking powder. Beat the eggs well, adding first part of the milk, then the flour and rest of the milk alternately. Beat the batter together quickly, in case the slices of apple and drop in a kettle of deep, smoking hot fat.

Clam Bisque.—Clam bisque is liked by every lover of these bivalves. To make it steam open two dozen big fresh clams and take from the shells. Chop them fine with a spray of parsley and a little onion and simmer them for thirty minutes with a cupful of water. Season with cloves, allspice and mace to taste. Thicken a quart of hot milk with two level tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, dissolved first in a little cold milk. Strain the clam mixture into the milk and serve immediately in bouillon cups, with a teaspoonful of whipped cream on top.

Tomato Pudding.

One can tomatoes, two juicy red onions, one cupful breadcrumbs, several thin slices of bacon.

Pour the contents of one can of tomatoes or an equal amount of fresh stewed tomatoes into a shallow baking dish. Into the tomatoes mix a cupful of dry breadcrumbs. Slice or chop the onions and mix well into the other ingredients. Pepper and salt to taste and place thin slices of bacon on top of the mixture. Bake in a hot oven until the bacon becomes a nice brown. This pudding is delicious when served hot.

Cottage Cheese Salad.

Take a quantity of cottage cheese, mash it with a potato masher until smooth, adding a little milk to moisten it sufficiently. Then chop very fine one small onion, several sprigs of parsley and one-half can of pimientos. Stir these into the cottage cheese, add a tablespoonful of salad dressing and serve on a leaf of lettuce. This makes delicious sandwiches, which spread between two thin slices of buttered bread. A few olives, a little hard boiled egg and cucumber chopped fine give added flavor.

Breaded Chicken.

Cut a tender chicken into seven pieces as if for frying, roll in beaten yolks of two eggs, then in finely grated breadcrumbs seasoned with chopped parsley, pepper and salt. Place in a dripping pan, dot the pieces with bits of butter, add a little water, bake slowly, basting often. When done take out chicken and make gravy in the pan by adding a mixture of flour and butter. Make smooth by stirring.

Why Ship Your Grain?

Why should any dry-land farmer ship his products to market in the form of hay and grain?

There is but one correct answer to this question. The answer is—he shouldn't do it.

Yet the average western farmer fails to do anything else. As a matter of fact the practice of selling wheat and oats, hay and other farm crops from the land, year after year, results in a gradual but constant loss of soil fertility.

It costs no more to till soil which will produce forty bushels of wheat per acre than soil which is so worn that it will produce but twenty.
Herein is a fundamental principle of farming, and one of the strongest arguments in favor of mixed farming.

The feeding of livestock not only means that 85 to 90 per cent of the fertilizing value of the crops can be returned to the land, but also that forage crops will be grown to accompany wheat, etc. The former crops draw from the air more nitrogen than is sold from the land in the shape of meat or milk products, and the effect is to build up instead of tear down.

Every farm should be a factory.
Dividends depend on the cost of marketing. Live stock provides a home market for the crops grown.
Feeding livestock is a means of condensing a product to about one-eighth of its original weight. Seven pounds out of every eight are thereby marketed on the farm, reducing the freight charges by 87 1/2%, and doing away with the usual haul to the local market or elevator.

The utilization of waste roughage,
the seasonable distribution of labor,
the added pleasure of farm life—all these are additional points for the western farmer to consider when mapping out his course to farm success.

Pure Food Exposition

Probably the biggest event ever staged in the Canadian West will be the Pure Food and Fashion Exhibition which will be held in Calgary from October 18th to 28th inclusive.

The handsome new horse show building at Victoria Park has been secured for this great event, and this alone, is a sign that the display of Pure Foods and Fashions will eclipse anything of its kind ever attempted in Western Canada.

Manager Cheeseman, the man behind the gun in this great undertaking, has had several years experience in conducting Pure Food Expositions in the middle West and South. He is also head of the Art Decorating Company of Calgary, and his training in this line of work will be of great value in making the Pure Food Show attractive.

As well as having secured all of the leading manufactures in the Dominion to make exhibits of their products, Manager Cheeseman has made arrangements with the Manitoba Government to have their wonderful tubercular exhibit shown at this exposition. This exhibit as well as showing the different stages of this dreaded disease, due in a great measure to the uses of impure foods, will point out why people should be careful of what they eat and wear.

This pure food Exposition will be a blessing to many a household.
The problems of the home will be demonstrated—explained [by those who know. There will be cooking competitions—an educational course in good living. Interspersed with these object lessons, there will be staged twice daily a vaudeville show of the best, as well as a midway of several of the best shows obtainable.

Judicial Sale of Farm Land

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN pursuant to the order of the Master in Chambers made on the 3rd day of September, A. D. 1913, that there will be sold by public auction at the Town Hall, in the Town of Gleichen, in the Province of Alberta, at the hour of 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, on Saturday, October 4th, A. D. 1913, the following lands, namely—the South-east Quarter of Section fourteen (14) township twenty-two (22), Range twenty-two (22), west of the Fourth meridian, containing one hundred and sixty acres more or less.

The said quarter-section is situated four and one-half miles from the town of Gleichen due east; about three and a half miles from the village of Cluny, at which are the nearest post-office, school and elevator. The nearest church is at Gleichen aforesaid.

The Plaintiff's Solicitors are informed:

That there is on the said quarter-section a dwelling house, barn and shed, the total value of which is about $300.

That the whole of the said quarter-section has been broken except from twenty to twenty-five acres situated in the north-west quarter thereof, but no portion of the land is in crop this season.

That the whole of the said quarter-section has been fenced.

That there is a well upon the said premises.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid fixed by the Master in Chambers.

Terms of Sale: Ten per cent of the purchase money to be deposited at the time of the sale with the Plaintiff's solicitors and the balance to be paid into Court to the credit of this action within sixty days after the date of sale without interest.

Further particulars will be furnished upon application to the Solicitors for the Plaintiff, or to the auctioneer.

Dated at Calgary, Alberta, this 3rd day of September, A. D. 1913.

MIXED FARMING

In the Need of the West Says Premier Sifton

Premier Sifton of Alberta who has been in the east lately, is reported as having told a Toronto newspaper man that mixed farming is the great need of the Canadian West. He said:

"The Western Provinces will be even more prosperous when the farmers go in for mixed farming. Our demonstration trains are fast bringing this new home to the minds of the farmers with conviction."

"There is an economic reason for impressing this truth on the minds of the farmers. It is this. All grain farming is speculative. If weather conditions, and all else, remained calculable from year to year, grain farming would have no villa. But one year the crops are all No. 1; then comes a poor year; next, an average good year; again a big year; then a failure. Under such conditions a man may be rich one year and a pauper another. But if the farmers went in for mixed farming, other crops besides grain and cattle and horses, there would be a balance of fortunes, and Western farmers would always be in a well-to-do position, with nothing to worry about."

Premier Sifton admitted that some of the discontent in the West was caused by bad farming. "But," he said, "on the whole the farmers are satisfied with the land and with the climate. Those who grouse most are the speculative farmers who want to get rich quick and fail to do so."

PUTTING CLASS AGAINST CLASS

Attempts to Make Western Farmers Regard Canadian Manufacturer as an Enemy

The Vancouver, B.C. News-Advertiser observes editorially:

"Out in Saskatoon the editor of The Grain Growers' Guide has been telling the organized Grain Growers how the farmers of the West are robbed by the railways, the banks, the manufacturers, the ship owners, and most other interests. This orator, who is himself a manufacturer of newspapers, and not a farmer, has been diligently trying to persuade the Western grain growers that they are the most injured men on earth. Writers and speakers who address a single class in this spirit have a great opportunity. No people live who cannot be made to believe that they do not get their share of the world's gains, and the man who goes about to show a class that they are chronically injured can always get a hearing."

The Western farmer is thus constantly taught to regard the Canadian manufacturer as an enemy. It is an easy lesson, because there are few factories in the prairie country. Nor are there many people who, out of their savings, buy a few bank or railway or industrial shares. The Western man is not satisfied with the modest return that the Eastern farmer obtains from his savings. He buys land and makes much larger profits on the unearned increment. His first homestead cost him nothing. On his subsequent land purchases he has made large gains, whether he filled the soil or not. The manufacturers of Eastern Canada have not made nearly such large returns on their investments as the class of Western farmers whom The Grain Growers' Guide represents. The stockholders in the banks and the railways have not received so many millions in the shape of profits from unearned increment. The manufacturer and the shareholder are on the average as fair and honest as the prairie farmer, who is neither better nor worse than other people. It is no more moral to work a harvester than to build one, to buy a quarter section for profit than to purchase a workshop."

"This special business of stirring up the hatred and jealousy of a worthy class of landowners against all other classes, and of the people in one part of Canada against those of other provinces, will fall and disappear. It has no constructive value. In time the West will have its own manufacturers, banks and transportation interests. When investments in land cease to pay the present large annual profits the trades and investments that are now denounced will be received with favor. In place of reviling the whole manufacturing interests the Prairie Provinces will seek to establish industries. This has happened in the Western Middle States, where there are now a great variety of interests, with corresponding opportunities for young men who do not choose to stay on the land."

"A quarter of a century ago a semi-political organization was formed in Ontario. It was intended to range the farmers as a class against other classes of the community, and for a time was quite successful, obtaining a considerable representation in Parliament and the Legislature. That sectional organization went to pieces, but not until some of its chief orators, organizers and writers had obtained public offices. No doubt there is political and other capital to be made by the same process in the prairie country. But the farmers themselves are not after this, and doubtless the same may be said of many of the leaders. The habit of appealing as members of an injured class to the class generally is easy to acquire and pleasant to follow. It involves no sacrifice. It is more popular than any other exhortation or any helpful teaching. No one who wishes to follow the lines of least resistance will tell his fellow-men that they are wrong when he can get more applause by telling them that they are wrong."

PATRONIZE HOME INDUSTRIES

The Daily Gleaner, Fredericton, N. B., advising its readers to "buy Canadian-made goods," gives the following concise and convincing reasons for patronizing home industries:

"It will mean the employment of many additional thousands of men and women in the factories of Canada."

"It will mean greater activity and more independence in the industrial life of the country."

"It will mean new factories for the cities and towns of Canada."

"It will mean a more profitable home market than the present one for the farmers of Canada."

"It will result in further inspiring the confidence of British investors in the stability of the business of Canada."

GET YOUR CANADIAN HOME FROM THE CANADIAN PACIFIC

Wonderfully fertile land is offered for sale by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at prices ranging from $11 to $30 per acre. There is no better agricultural land than this virgin Canadian soil. It is unsurpassed for all forms of agriculture, including grain growing, stock raising, dairying, poultry culture, vegetable growing, and general mixed farming. The lands are convenient to railways and markets, and are located in a country of low taxation and delightful climate.

TWENTY YEARS TO PAY

Under the Company's new policy no land is sold to speculators, but only to those who will occupy and improve it. The terms of sale are now one-twentieth cash and the balance spread over twenty years, with interest at six per cent per annum.

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Under certain conditions the Company will advance a loan of $2000 to new settlers to be used in erecting a house and barn, fencing the land and sinking a well. This loan is repayable on the same terms as the purchase price.

It was almost as much his eagerness to keep this hidden from Joan's knowledge, for it was intolerable to him to think that she should come to know what a crime he had been guilty of, as his dislike of Thorold that made the thought of Joan's marriage, so distasteful to him. He would have risked and done much to make certain that Joan should never know of his past, and yet he had resigned himself to the inevitable; partly because a certain clear-sightedness there was in the man told him that Edward Thorold was well suited to guard and care for Joan and protect her from the dangers that surrounded her, and partly because of a certain fatalistic strain in his character. These two causes together had been the chief factors in the sort of sullen passivity with which he had watched Thorold and Joan come together, but now it began to seem to him that he would willingly risk and lose all to separate them again. Besides, if he threw in his lot unreservedly with Durand and aided him without reserve—who could tell what might not happen? It was as though a fever burned him up, and strange thoughts passed through his mind. Rising to his feet, he went to the water-tap and drank thirstily.

That's a cold drink, observed Durand, watching him; is there no whisky or brandy left?

Aye, answered Green, but I am not enough already.

Of course, there's Monday, said Durand thoughtfully; you know Monday thinks she is for him?

Oh, as for Monday, said Green, lifting his hand and letting it fall slowly; as for Monday—

Of course, Durand continued, she would kill him or he would kill her inside of a week.

As for Monday, said Green again and repeated his gesture of slowly lifting and letting fall his hand. But she calls me her friend, he said softly.

Ah, that's something, smiled Durand in his mocking way; but I shall have to talk to Billy Man about this later on. Do you understand what you have to do to-night?

Green nodded.

Yes, he said, his manner suddenly changing to one of reckless boastfulness, and to-night I'll show you if there is another cross-cove in all London as knows his lay better nor me. I am to meet Billy Man at the corner by there at two?

Yes, said Durand, and gave him one or two more instructions, and then went away to interview Sir Monday and Crookes and make sure that both of those worthies understood the part assigned them.

In this remarkable confederation of criminals—perhaps the most dangerous that has existed in England in recent years—Durand himself seldom took any active part in the carrying out of the enterprises he was so active in planning. Billy Man, however, their formidable and mysterious leader, if on the spot at all, always took the foremost place in the actual procedure, assisted generally either by Crookes or Monday. On this occasion Monday was to remain outside on guard while Crookes and Green, both expert in the use of the tools a burglar needs, effected an entrance. Then they were to attack the great safe, while Billy Man, entering after them, crept up above, fastened Sir John's door and that of the only man servant in the house with gimlets, and then returned to help Crookes and Green in their attack on the safe.

Punctually at the hour appointed, Green was at the meeting place. First Monday passed him and lounged away; and soon after he had disappeared a small slightly built man came up, walking with an apparently slow and careless yet really rapid gait. He had both hands in his pockets, and he wore his cap pulled down over his eyes and his coat collar turned up so that his features were hardly discernible. But Green knew at once that this was the formidable and mysterious Billy Man, and he felt himself turning pale as he watched the other's quiet approach.

By way of greeting, the new comer cursed him with a quite remarkable poignancy of insult, and then beckoning him to follow set off in the direction of the Martin's house. Green had listened in perfect silence to the foul abuse with which he had been overwhelmed, for there was about this leader of theirs, Billy Man, as they called him, something that daunted the most reckless of them and gave pause to the most desperate; that chilled them as it were, with a suggestion of evil beyond their evil, of courage, desperation, recklessness, brutality, defiance, beyond all they knew or could imagine.

To-night he seemed in a mood even more vicious than usual, for on their coming on Monday so silently and softly that he failed to notice their approach, Billy Man struck him a furious blow on the mouth.

That's to remind you to keep a better look out, snarled Billy Man, and he chilled Green to the heart to see how the beaten ruffian whimpered and crouched down like a chastised dog and seemed to dare not even to protest. Yet Green knew that Monday had the record and the reputation of a dangerous man to meddle with or cross in the slightest.

Hurrying in, Billy Man and Green came to a dark alley way that ran by the side of a tall, blank wall. Pausing after he had gone a few yards, and without once looking round to see if Green followed, Billy Man clambered up this wall like a cat and dropped down inside it. Fortunately, Green had received detailed instructions, and by the aid of a loose brick and a nail driven in to serve as a foothold, he, too, climbed up and over the wall and dropped down within.

They were now in the garden surrounding the Martins' house, and as rapidly and as silently as he could Green hurried on, swearing to himself at Billy Man for not having waited for him. A few steps further on he caught sight of his leader's dark form crouching by the wall, and he was only just in time to catch his arm as he flew with bare and ready knife at a waiting figure whose back was turned towards them.

Why, that's Sneezel, he remonstrated, what are you a-doing of, Mr. Man, sir?

What is the fool asleep for, then? growled Billy Man.

I wasn't, protested Crookes indignantly, turning round and seeing who had come upon him; only I didn't hear you, that's all.

Then you should have heard us, retorted Billy Man, and enforced the injunction with a hearty kick that Crookes accepted as meekly as Monday had endured the chastisement he had received. Now, get to work right away, Billy Man ordered; we'll waste no more time.

Everything had been carefully planned and thought out beforehand, and in a wonderfully short time the window was forced, the sash raised and the three men were within. Very carefully they closed the window behind them, and only careful examination of it would have shown that an entrance had been effected there.

The first thing they did was to find the library; and there Green and Crookes waited while Billy Man slipped silently to the front door, disconnected a burglar alarm which was attached to it, and drew the bolts and unlocked it, so that if they were disturbed they might have an easy way of escape.

The safe in the library was one of modern construction and presented considerable difficulty even to such expert operators as Crookes and Green. While they worked at it Billy Man who was not skilled in the mechanical branches of their profession, went prowling outside. First of all, as already arranged, he fastened the doors of Sir John Martin and of the manservant by the aid of gimlets he drove through the door into the doorpost; and then he began to look into the other rooms to see what he could pick up worth taking.

He had just found some rings lying on the mantelpiece in Lady Martin's boudoir and had come out again into the passage, when he heard a noise, and looking saw a stout, elderly gentleman coming quietly up the stairs with a lighted candle in his hand.

It was Sir John Martin who, as it happened had been sitting up very late working at some intricate accounts and was now placidly on his way to bed, quite ignorant of the fact that his roof sheltered three such undesired visitors.

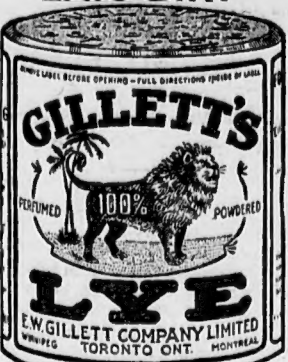

Billy Man's impulse was to fly at him at once; but some idea of prudence that even he possessed made him crouch down in the hope that Sir John would pass him unobserved. But just as Sir John reached the head of the stairs, it happened that Green dropped some tool with a sound quite distinctly audible.

Sir John paused and listened, and Billy Man crouched lower with his keen knife ready in his hand.

Strangely, said Sir John. I certainly thought—

Billy Man passed his tongue slowly round his lips. He was almost certain that Sir John meant to descend and if so he had determined he would spring on him the moment that he turned his back.

But apparently reassured, Sir John came on along the passage and he paused by a window and proceeded to unfasten it. Billy Man watched him in amazement, quite unable to understand what he was doing. Opening the window he leaned out, as if enjoying the fresh night air, and then Billy Man saw him beckon to someone below. Still he had no suspicion of what this meant till he heard Sir John call softly:

Constable, constable, there are burglars in—

Well, my dear, said Mr. Wiggins on the night of election day, did you vote this morning?

I did, indeed, replied Mrs. Wiggins. I not only voted, but I wrote out my reasons for voting as I did: on the back of the ballot and signed my name. You men may feel the need of a secret ballot, but I am not afraid to have anybody know why I voted or why.

AN OLD NURSE
Persuaded Doctor to Drink Postum

An old faithful nurse and an experienced doctor, are a pretty strong combination in favor of Postum, instead of tea and coffee.

"I began to drink Postum five years ago on the advice of an old nurse." "During an unusually busy winter, between tea, coffee and overwork, I became a victim of insomnia. In a month after beginning Postum, in place of tea and coffee, I could eat anything and sleep as soundly as a baby."

"In three months I had gained twenty pounds in weight. I now use Postum altogether instead of tea and coffee; even at bedtime with a soda cracker or some other tasty biscuit."

"Having a little tendency to Diabetes, I used a small quantity of saccharine instead of sugar, to sweeten with. I may add that today tea or coffee are never present in our house and have many patients, on my advice, have adopted Postum as their regular beverage."

"In conclusion I can assure anyone that, as a refreshing, nourishing and nerve-strengthening beverage, there is nothing equal to Postum."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms. Regular (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a large heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have served that way in the future. "There's a Reason" for Postum.

Thunderstorms

In the course of a recent paper, Professor W. J. Humphreys, of the U. S. Weather bureau, points out that, as thunderstorms are usually, if not always connected with large cumulus clouds, it follows that a vigorous uprush of air is a necessary accompaniment of thunderstorms. Further, if the upward velocity of the air is as much as eight metres per second—and it may easily exceed this amount—then no water drops, whatever their size, can fall through it. Those already small enough will be carried up, while the larger drops will be torn to bits, and the spray thus formed carried aloft. It appears, then, that the strong upward currents of air within cumulus clouds necessarily must break up and thereby positively electrify the larger raindrops. These in turn doubtless unite again, possibly many times, only to be rebroken and still further positively charged. After a time, the drops of course, reach a place where the uprush of air is not sufficient to support them, and they fall as positively charged rain, while the negatively charged spray is blown aloft, whence after more or less coalescence into larger drops, it falls as the negatively charged rain, though much of the negatively charged spray necessarily remains aloft, where it is slowly evaporated. Hence the bulk of the electricity brought down is positive, and hence, too, the heavier portions of the rain, and the larger drops usually are positively charged, while the negative electricity is mainly confined to the lighter part of the storm, when the drops, as a rule, are comparatively small. This, then, is the latest and apparently, correct idea, as developed by Simpson, of the origin of the great amount of electricity in thunderstorms. If it had a weak point at all, as first set forth, it was in the assumption that such storms are always accompanied by a rapid uprush of air, sufficient to split up the larger raindrops; but its discussion seems to justify the assumption, and thus fully strengthens the old weak link in the logical chain.

Why Duels are Harmless

A large proportion of the duels in France end without bloodshed. When the offence is not very serious it is agreed beforehand that the words of command shall be given so rapidly that duellists will not have time to take good aim. Sometimes three shots are exchanged without a hit, and then the seconds step in and—honor is satisfied. At the word "Fire" the pistol is raised instantly, and it must be discharged not later than the word three, so the speed with which these words are given regulates the time in which it is possible to take aim.

Therefore the speed with which they are spoken is agreed upon beforehand in this depending upon the seriousness of the duel. The words are timed with a metronome. If the encounter be very serious this is set at the slowest speed, eighty beats a minute, which gives time for taking accurate aim. A speed of 140 beats a minute allows no time for aiming, and therefore is used when the seconds consider the duel should be made as little dangerous as possible.

The Ma. Car's F. runner

The first daily overland mail coach arrived at St. Joseph, Mo., fifty-four years ago last Friday, seventeen days from Sacramento. The overland stage was the successor of the pony express that had been established between St. Joseph and Sacramento the preceding year, and provided a through mail line from New York to the Pacific coast.

Between the Missouri River, the western terminus of the railroad, and Sacramento the distance was traversed by fleet horsemen, each of whom were paid $200 a month, but the danger from hostile Indians was great. The building of a telegraph line to the Pacific put the money express out of commission, and the completion in 1869 of a continuous line of railway across the continent ended the picturesque but comparatively slow overland stage-coach system. As a feeder to the railroad, however, the stage continued to have a wide sphere of usefulness for many years, and has not yet entirely disappeared.

To See the Back of Your Eye

Behind the eye, what is called the retina, is lined with branching blood vessels, and a curious but perfectly simple experiment will enable you to see these. Place yourself in a dark room, opposite a dark-colored wall; then, light a candle and holding it in your hand, move it up and down before your eyes, all the time looking not at the candle but at the wall beyond. After a little practice you will see appear on the wall a great branching figure in black on a reddish surface. What you are looking at is the shadow of these blood vessels at the back of your own eye. Perhaps the most curious part of the whole thing is that the part of the eye which receives the impression of light must be behind these blood vessels.

So many people have been vaccinated as the result of an outbreak of smallpox in Stockholm that the supply of vaccine has been exhausted. Sufficient vaccine for 100,000 persons has been ordered from abroad. Vaccination parties are now fashionable in Stockholm. Guests are invited to an "at home" at 5 o'clock and the doctor arrives and vaccinates them. When this is over the guests dine together.

Dear, quiet Aunt Mary had gone up from London to visit a golfing family of nephews and nieces. At tea the first afternoon, someone managed to stop talking long enough to ask:

Well, Aunt Mary, and how did you spend the morning?

Oh, went for a walk on the moor. A good many people seemed to be about, and some of them called out to me in a most eccentric manner. But I did not take any notice of them. And oh, my dear, I found such a number of curious little round things! I brought them home to ask you what they are.

Hereupon Aunt Mary opened her workbag and produced twenty-four golf balls.

Many a man's soiled character has been washed in a woman's tears.

MORE WOMEN THAN MEN

They Throw Off Diseases More Easily, That's the Reason

The fact that in almost all civilized countries women outnumber men has been ascribed to the higher birth rate of girl babies; yet statistics show that 105 boys are born to every 100 girls. According to figures compiled by a European statistician the girl has a better chance than the boy of attaining maturity.

He finds that from the third to the fifteenth year the mortality for both sexes is the same; from the fifteenth to the nineteenth year the critical age for girls the girl's chances are slightly better than the boy's; from the thirtieth year to the thirty-fifth the mortality among women is smaller than among men, and it continues smaller until a half, the sexes once more have the same chance of survival, but above 85 years of age women again stands a much better chance than man.

To account for this difference the statistician points out that woman has greater resilience in shaking off diseases than man. It is true that the physical strength of man is greater than woman's but a woman's power of endurance is more robust.

One reason for this is that woman possesses a finer perception of her power of endurance than a man, and when her perception warns her of fatigue she stops. A man does not stop until his power is exhausted. His nervous system is not as finely organized as a woman's, and as Mosso, the Italian physiologist, has pointed out men and women are entirely dependent upon their nerves for caution not to over-exert. While it is true that women more easily contract many diseases, particularly nervous and mental diseases, than men, they overcome them with greater ease.

Royal Punishment

The constraints and formalities which surround royalty are particularly trying to youth, and while the Queen of Holland could never refer to her childhood as being a very dull one, as Queen Victoria in mature years described her own at Kensington Palace, yet when her Dutch Majesty was a little girl she greatly preferred playing with her dolls to attending to the official duties that had already begun for her. If you don't behave, I'll make you a queen, she is said to have admonished an erring doll.

Again, one day she was overheard telling one of the dolls, who evidently refused to take a necessary nap:

If you don't go to sleep, you shall go out tomorrow in a carriage, and all the time you shall bow right and left to people who keep pulling off their hats! So hurry up and off to sleep!

Coal Loading by Vacuum Pipes

The vacuum-cleaner principle is having new applications every day; but one of the strongest is for the unloading of coal cars. A big Austrian power plant is being equipped to handle all its coal by vacuum pipes. Coal that is graded according to Austrian standards as dust coal and nut coal is delivered in carload lots to the plant and a great pipe is dropped into the car. The coal is sucked up through this pipe and carried to the storage piles two hundred yards away. Coal for the boiler fires is carried from the storage pile by other vacuum pipes direct to the fire and there fed in by mechanical stokers.

The Smallest Dynamo

A hilliparian electric dynamo, perfect in every detail, but weighing only a quarter of an ounce, was shown at work before the Paris Academy of Science. Its constructor is a French mechanic named Trevet. This dynamo is three-fifths of an inch long, half an inch wide, and three-fifths of an inch high. The coil is a quarter of an inch in diameter, and is wired with five and a half feet of silk insulated copper wire one-five hundredth of an inch in thickness. A tension is indicated of 3.5 volts by a current of 0.2 ampere, but as to its power there is no instrument sensitive enough to record it. While at work the toy machine made a sound like the humming of a bee.

Writing for Posterity

A prominent French critic, the story runs, once told to George Bernard Shaw:

You are putting on a new comedy Monday night. Let me attend one of the dress rehearsals, won't you?

Impossible, said Mr. Shaw. My dress rehearsals are always private. I have to refuse, even the most distinguished critics access to them.

But, said the other, I want to write a critical criticism. If I have to write and telegraph it in a few minutes on Monday night it will be very hurriedly done, and I fear it will give a wrong impression of your comedy to Paris the next day.

Have no anxiety on that score, Mr. Shaw replied. My comedies are not written for the next day.

What Fishes Know

That fish possess a certain power of reason is affirmed by many who have studied them. They often learn to recognize the voice of one who feeds them. Fish will congregate in places where food is habitually thrown to them. If a morsel proves too large to be swallowed, they have been known to divide it on a sharp stone.

SOUTH POLE RELICS

Pathetic Witnesses of Grim Tragedy of Capt. Scott

A big plain cooking pot, whose interior has been scraped clean and bare by men at the point of death, by starvation; an empty provision bag, a sledging shovel, the inner lining of the tent in which the remains of Captain Scott and his companions were found by the search party, an old shabby much-thumbed sixpenny edition, of Mary Johnston's story of old Virginia, 'By Order of the Company,' which when picked up in Captain Scott's tent, was curiously enough open at a chapter headed: 'We go out into the Night'—these are among the relics of the great Antarctic tragedy which were brought back by the Terra Nova, and which are now attracting thousands of people to the Earl's Court Exhibition, where they are being shown.

It is a pathetic and most impressive collection, and not the least interesting feature is an exact model in section of the igloo, or cave, dug in the snow by the northern party of the expedition, who were forced to winter in Terra Nova bay owing to the ship being unable to pick them up. For seven months the party lived in the cave of snow and ice, on rations sufficient for only one month. There were six men altogether, under Lieut. Campbell, and they used blubber for everything—food, light and fuel. When found, their ice cave was as black as a coal mine with carbon, and so were the men.

When Lieut. Campbell visited the exhibition he remarked to Lord Chelmsford that he shivered when he looked upon the realistic reproduction of the igloo, which brought back to him mind so vividly those terrible long seven months.

Among other relics might be mentioned the theodolite which fixed the position of the South Pole, the camera with which photographs of the Pole were taken, a repairing hammer, a lamp made from an empty tin to burn a mixture of vaseline and spirit, a typewriter, several sleeping bags, skis of Capt. Scott, Lieut. Bowers and Dr. Wilson, and an instrument box which Captain Scott and his party used on the return from the Pole.

The last of death is perhaps the most striking of the relics. It is the inner lining only, the outer covering having been used as a pall for the bodies—a tiny structure hardly, to all appearances, fit shelter against the Antarctic blizzard.

Printing by Motor-Cycle

During a recent storm at Elgin, Illinois, the engine of a motor-cycle was made use of to print a newspaper. When the severity of the storm made it imperative that the city shut off the electric power, the paper found itself without power to print its regular edition. A motor-cycle offered his machine and services, and by connecting the engine to the press by means of a belt the paper was run off without trouble.

A Tower of Gold

According to a law promulgated in Germany in 1871, the $30,000,000 which France paid in indemnity to the Prussians the previous year was guarded in the Tower of Gold at Spandau, the famous fortress situated eight miles from Berlin. Besides this amount of money, definitely set aside, is a quantity of gold in reserve for commercial panics. In order to safeguard such a massive store great precautions have been taken for the last 42 years. The money is kept on two floors of the fortress and is packed in 120000000 chests. Each chest contains $25,000 in gold. The inviolability of these chambers is secured in the following manner: They have triple doors with various locks, whose keys are held by certain officials of the Ministry of War, and these keys each open one door, so that no one official is ever able to enter alone. The clamps of the chests are sealed and stamped in such a way that it is not possible for them to be tampered with without danger of instant discovery. Moreover, the weight of each sack and chest is registered.

Women Taxi Drivers

Women driving taxicabs for public hire are becoming quite a familiar sight in the west end of London. As a rule the women who have taken to the wheel are young and in not a few cases quite prepossessing in the bargain, with the result that their services are eagerly sought by the young bloods about town. Thoroughly trained, these lady chauffeurs are expert drivers and pilot their cars through the densest traffic without the slightest hesitation or the least sign of nervousness. In addition many have a sound knowledge of the mechanism of their cars, and can successfully undertake slight repairs. Several firms who hire out motor-cars now provide lady chauffeurs if desired.

That Awful Child

Bobby—Slater must be able to see in the dark.

Mother—How so?

Bobby—Because last night when she was in sitting with Mr. Staylate in the parlor I heard her say: Why, Tom, you haven't shaved.

He—I wonder what the meaning of that picture is? The youth in the middle is in tender attitude.

She—Oh, don't you see? He has just asked her to marry him and she is accepting him. How sweet! What does the artist call the picture?

He (looking about)—Oh, I see, it's written on a card at the bottom: Sold.

Morenci, Arizona, has no streets, only steep trails over the rocks and mountains. The town contains no automobiles or vehicles of any kind, and sturdy ponies, mules and burros pack all the supplies, while funerals must be attended by train.

Excavation work for the hole in which the biggest flagpole in the British empire is to be placed opposite the new courthouse, Vancouver, has been begun and it is expected that the big stick will be flying the flag to the breeze by the first of September.

Emily—Isn't it funny how timid Ellen is?

Maude—Dear, yes; she doesn't want to go faster than eighty-five miles an hour when she rides on the back of Charlie's motorcycle.

What He's Waiting For

Why don't you ask her to marry you? You've been calling on her for two years now.

I know, but I am waiting.

You've heard her sing hundreds of times, and you like her voice.

That's true.

You've heard her play the piano.

You know she's an accomplished musician.

You've eaten meals she has cooked.

You have seen her handiwork about the house. She'll make a splendid housewife.

I know all that, but—

She's a delightful hostess. You've seen her when she was entertaining friends.

I admit that.

Then why wait any longer?

I'm waiting to see her in a quarrel with her mother. I want to see how she acts when she loses her temper.

What do I say at the wedding?

Not a word. All you utter is the cheque.

Dairying Progress Shown

Prince Albert, Sask.—As showing the progress which has been made in mixed farming and dairying in the country northwest of Prince Albert, it is stated that the Shellbrook Creamery has to date manufactured 6,000 pounds more butter than was produced to the corresponding date last year. The Shellbrook Creamery took second standing in the provincial competition this year.

"Woodlands," Middleton, N.S.

There is a young man in New York who is undoubtedly still wondering whether he has an unusually large foot or whether a certain German lad of generous dimension, from Jersey is troubled with near-sightedness.

The woman in question boarded a New York bound ferry boat with a big heavy valise. Apparently very much fatigued from her efforts, she threw herself into a seat, landing her bulky grip squarely upon the toes of a young man next to her. He responded with a look of suppressed rage and pain, and then shoved the valise aside, unnoticed by the woman.

A few minutes later, when the ferry reached its slip, the young man was suddenly amazed to behold the stout lady fumbling about with her hand on his foot. Thoroughly aroused at this liberty, he was about to demand an explanation, when the woman, with a look of great embarrassment, exclaimed: Ach! Excuse me, it looks just like mine bag.

Looking Ahead

Bought a second-hand fire escape cheap today.

What did you want with it?

Thought maybe I might have money enough some day to build a house to fit it.

An early morning customer in an optician's shop was a young woman with a determined air. She addressed the first salesman she saw. I want to look at a pair of eyeglasses, sir, of extra magnifying power.

Yes, ma'am, replied the salesman; something very strong?

Yes, sir. While visiting in the country I made a very painful blunder which I never want to repeat.

Indeed! Mistook a stranger for an acquaintance?

No, not exactly that; I mistook a bumblebee for a blackberry.

May I call to Other Planets

The London Daily Citizen announces the discovery of a gas one-sixteenth the weight of hydrogen.

Its existence on earth has not yet been determined, but the leading scientists, including Sir William Ramsay are confident they can find or produce it.

Its presence in the sun was definitely established by a discovery made during the last eclipse.

The Daily Citizen quotes an anonymous scientist who describes the gas as being named eoronium. If it can be produced on this earth it will revolutionize the science of aerostatics. When the earth becomes too cold for human habitation the people could move in airships to any planet that might strike their fancy. This would be unnecessary for a million years or more.

Lord Strathcona Active

Lord Strathcona was found on his 93rd birthday sitting at his desk, where he worked until four o'clock on this hot August day. He was not driven to work, he declared, by the reason that induced most people to work.

The Canadian High Commissioner surprised the representative of the Daily Chronicle who inquired how he would observe his centenary seven years hence, in answering that he would do so by keeping at work as usual.

I never take notice of the day, otherwise, said Lord Strathcona. Today, I have a little more work than usual.

The reply is characteristic of the man. The High Commissioner sat surrounded by papers, there were few signs of his great age. His dark eyes flashed under his shaggy eyebrows like those of a man of fifty.

I have been connected with the Dominion of Canada for three-quarters of a century, he said. It has, indeed, become a very great country, but nothing to what it is destined to become. In the next quarter of a century I believe it will have a population exceeding that of the United Kingdom and perhaps more. It has everything required to make a great nation. Nevertheless, I am convinced that it will always remain indissolubly allied to the mother country. Canada is proud of its connection with the empire.

In answer to the question how to live to his age, Lord Strathcona said: By not thinking of old age, but just going steadily on with work that one is doing, being patient and not in a hurry.

A Sound Reason

Say, are you the boy I sent with a letter about three weeks ago?

Boy—Yes, sir.

Well, why didn't you bring the answer back?

Boy—You told me to wait for a reply, and they told me that the man won't be home until next spring.

Our pastor preached a sermon on marriage last Sunday. Did it seem to have a stimulating effect? No, on the contrary; it was so solemn and conveyed so many warnings that it broke off two engagements.

CURED DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS

And Is Depended On to Right Stomach and Liver Disorders

Once Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are introduced into the family and their efficiency becomes known they are usually found too valuable to do without. For everyday ills arising from liver and bowel disorders they bring relief promptly, and when complicated diseases of the kidneys and liver develop they often prove a successful cure after doctors have failed. As an illustration, you may read the following, which was received a few days ago:

Mrs. John Wright, 53 McGee street, Toronto, Ont., states: "We have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for ten years, and would not be without them. My husband suffered from kidney trouble, and after taking treatment from several doctors without receiving any benefit, tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which worked a complete cure. Since that time we have used them for all stomach and liver disorders."

Among the bewildered, and in some cases indignant, spectators gathered at the recent Futurist exhibition of painting and sculpture in Chicago was a young man from Springfield, in charge of a cousin who is 'strong for the new movement in art.'

The youth remained silent during the view and the subsequent explanations of the new idea given him by his cousin.

Well, said the latter finally, you don't seem particularly enthusiastic about them. What do you think?

Think! growled the youth from Springfield. Why, I have got two aunts at home that can knit better pictures than those.

Mr. Elliot—Oh, yes. I have met nearly all our great inventors.

Mrs. Justup—Don't you know I'd like to meet Mr. Vacuum, inventor of the vacuum cleaner.

Certainly; you may ask her, too, if you wish.

dollar they owe and still have over $25 in the treasury. Already they are figuring on more of their popular entertainments to raise more funds to improve still further their equipment.

In view of the fact that there are very few of the boys who own property in town, but are the same whom we call upon when in distress while the rest of us stand around and criticize them as they work untiring and often take chances in losing their lives to save our belongings, then we say they are entitled to the very best the land affords.

More, it is up to the citizens of Gleichen occasionally dig into their jeans and give the boys just some such treat as they had last Thursday.

When the last course came on the boys looked longingly upon it and then urgently requested Mrs. Marshall not to tempt them with anything more of her good edibles, reminding her that should a fire alarm sound just then they were so heavily loaded that they would surely beat their slowest record. But in vain, she would insist on delicious fruit of many varieties being devoured.

Then Sec. Whiteley took up the toast list which was a varied one of speeches, stories, songs, etc. The first mentioned was "The King," and next came "Our Guests." In responding to this Ald. Leggett asked for a toast to the "Gleichen Fire Brigade," and complimented the officers and brigade on the good work they had accomplished in a short address and offered his undivided support in anyway he could give it, adding that he thought the town should be proud to have such a good class of young and willing firemen. W. P. Evans asked for toasts for Chief Marshall, Captains Billy Service and Harry Taylor of the chemical engines and Captain Teddy Wagstaff of the hose reel, and also Sec.-Treas. Whiteley, each replying briefly.

Then until until shortly after midnight stories were told and and songs rendered by Messrs. Tom Woodland, Teddy Wagstaff and several by Mosey Lee. While J. J. Marshall was called upon to respond to a toast of the "Old-timers," and gave the history of fire fighting from the beginning of Gleichen and told some amusing history.

With a hearty toast to "Our hostess" and thanking Mrs. Marshall most sincerely the good time ended by singing "God Save The King".

Miss Davis has opened a dress-making parlor, Crowfoot St., entry via the Telephone Exchange stairway, where she is prepared to meet all the ladies of Gleichen. Miss Davis has also taken over the agency for the Spirella model from Mrs. Convey and will be pleased to meet all former customers and others interested.
